LOOK THE ROUTE

Autumn is a gorgeous time in the South of France: most of the tourists have gone, the French are all back at work after their whole month off and the sea is still warm. Fly into Nice, follow the coastal road west, take a detour inland for a side trip to magical St Paul de Vence, and then up into the hills of the Alpes-Maritime to the pretty medieval village of Tourrettes-sur-Loup.

STAY THE FINISH

Once an estate owned by Sean Connery, Terre Blanche is a Provençal all-suite, village-style hotel set in 750 acres of wooded parkland, with rooms in little cottages hidden away among the lavender and wisteria. Tourrettes-sur-Loup is just a 15-minute drive away – if you can tear yourself from the hotel's large outdoor infinity pool and excellent spa. Doubles from around £247; terre-blanche.com. British Airways (ba.com) has return flights from London Heathrow to Nice from around £150

SEE

PIT STOP

Pop down to the marina in Antibes to ogle the super-yachts, and when you're further inland, break for coffee and pastries at Le Grand Saule in Séranon (+33 4 93 60 76 01). Take a detour on the way back to Nice for lunch at the magical hotel La Colombe d'Or, a former hangout of Picasso, Matisse and Chagall, who used to exchange art for rooms – which is still on display there today. Doubles from around £260, room only; lacolombedor.com
